

ABSTRACT

This dissertation analyses multi-item, multi-installation deterministic inventory systems - both parallel as well as serial installation types. Certain restrictions; such as, space and resource have also been explicitly considered along with discount. An iterative method of solving these problems have been proposed and computer tested for several numerical problems. The solution method proposed has been compared with existing ones.